Admission

College of Communication

Catalog Version

Communication is the art and science of creating and sharing meaning. In the College of Communication, you'll develop a deeper understanding of the complex and challenging communication practices and processes that characterize our rapidly changing world; you'll master the techniques for crafting and delivering messages across a variety of social contexts and platforms: face to face, print, audio, video, Web and other social media. You'll learn from exceptional teachers - from professors who have many years of experience in some of the biggest media markets in the nation, and from scholars publishing in some of the top national and international journals. You'll gain hands-on experience in our state-of-the-art facilities, through our award-winning radio station and newspaper, and through a wide range of internships and community projects.

The recent creation of a College of Communication at DePaul has set the stage for enhanced quality, substantially enriched curricular and programmatic offerings, joint programming with other schools and colleges within the university, expanded opportunities for our students to engage in workplace experiential learning; increased regional and national visibility; and significant additional growth in undergraduate programs, graduate programs, and overall
In order to better accommodate the increasing complexity of the undergraduate curriculum, student demand for more degree options in specialized areas, the need to better blend theory and practice, and the changing contours of communication fields with the advent of new media technologies and globalization, the College of Communication faculty recently approved five new BA degree programs (available Fall 2008). They are:

BA in Communication Studies

The Bachelor of Arts in Communication Studies merges what used to be two distinct areas of study within the Department of Communication: Relational, Group and Organizational Communication, and Culture and Communication. The BA in Communication Studies is designed to respond flexibly to students’ desire to complete coursework examining the dynamics of human communication in interpersonal, group and workplace contexts, or intercultural and multicultural communication in various social, political, and performative settings. The merger between these two areas is all the more natural when one considers that both offer advanced coursework that supports a five-year program leading up to the MA in Organizational and Multicultural Communication.

BA in Journalism

The BA in Journalism prepares students to work as journalism professionals and places the social responsibility of the press and social justice at the center of the curriculum. This distinguishes the Journalism program both regionally and nationally. Part of the undergraduate journalism curriculum requires students to gather news and report on Chicago residents who might not always have a voice in our mainstream media. This type of community-based work is evident in courses such as Community Journalism, Investigative Reporting and Online Journalism. The existing five-year program in Journalism culminates in an MA in Journalism concentrating on social justice, social responsibility and ethics of the media. The resources (e.g., television studio and lab resources) available at the Communication and Media Center at the Loop campus now afford journalism students the opportunity to develop the technological expertise necessary to produce professional journalism and ensure that all students enter new multimedia and interactive environments prepared to work effectively.

BA in Media and Cinema Studies

The BA in Media and Cinema Studies strategically combines the faculty expertise, curricula and facilities of media areas in Communication, CTI (e.g., Digital Cinema) and other university units to provide students with the critical frameworks, creative opportunities and technological expertise to become socially responsible leaders in the growing and converging areas of multimedia. The major combines a rich course selection in several areas of study: film; radio, television, and new media. Coursework combines theory and critical analysis with production courses taught at both the Lincoln Park (e.g., radio) and Loop campuses (e.g., television/video or cinema). The BA in Media and Cinema Studies changes its name from Radio, TV, Film to better reflect its continued coverage of traditional media, and its growing curricular associations with the Digital Cinema Program. The Media and Cinema Studies major also houses the five-year BA/MA program leading up to the Master of Arts degree in Media, Culture and Society.

BA in Public Relations and Advertising

The BA in Public Relations and Advertising offers students a single flexible concentration, allowing for specialization in either public relations or advertising, or the pursuit of coursework in both. Classes in this program emphasize theory and practice, writing in both public relations and advertising, law and ethics, production, program development and implementation, critical perspectives, and special topics like contemporary trends, health public relations, and global messages.

BA in Communication and Media
The BA in Communication and Media offers students the opportunity to pursue an interdisciplinary, non-specialized program in communication and media. This generalist degree will provide flexibility for transfer students and others who have not determined their precise career trajectory, while affording them the fundamental communication and critical thinking skills needed to enter jobs across the public, private and non-profit sectors, or to continue their education in academic or professional post-graduate programs. This major will also serve the needs of those students who would like to complete a communication degree, by taking mostly evening courses.

Bachelor of Arts Degree Requirements

Competence in Modern Language

Students who intend to graduate with a Bachelor of Arts degree in the College of Communication will be required to demonstrate competence in a modern language. Such competence may be demonstrated in one of several ways:

- completing the last course in a second year high school course work in a modern language or Latin
- completing the last course in the first-year college sequence of any language
- completing a college course beyond the first-year level in any language
- achieving a satisfactory score on any of the Modern Language placement examinations administered at DePaul
- achieving a satisfactory rating in a proficiency examination accepted by DePaul
- achieving a score of 3 or higher on the Advance Placement (AP) test for any language (must be completed during high school)
- achieving a score of 5 or higher in the Language B assessment from a Standard or Higher Level International Baccalaureate (IB) program
- achieving a satisfactory score on the CLEP examination. (Note that CLEP scores may be used only to meet the language requirement. Credit is not awarded in modern languages on the basis of CLEP scores).

Students with some modern language training should consult with the Modern Language Department about the course with which they should begin. Students with little or no previous work in the language will be required to complete the entire three-course introductory sequence.

Liberal Studies Requirements

Core Requirements

Liberal Studies Requirements

COMMON CORE

First Year Program: 16 quarter hours required as follows: 4 quarter hours in Discover Chicago or Explore Chicago, 4 quarter hours in Focal Point Seminar, 8 quarter hours in Composition and Rhetoric.

Mathematical and Technological Literacy: 4 or 8 quarter hours required, depending on placement.

Sophomore Seminar: 4 quarter hours required. Sophomore Seminar on Multiculturalism in the United States.

Junior Year Experiential Learning: 4 quarter hours required. If the Junior Year Experiential Learning requirement also fulfills a major field requirement, students may substitute a Liberal Studies domain elective (from outside their major field area), or use the third course in the modern language option for this requirement.

Senior Capstone: 4 quarter hours required. Students majoring in Communication complete the Capstone in their College. If they are double majoring and/or in the Honors program, students must also follow the capstone guidelines for that area.

LEARNING DOMAINS

Note: Students who complete 8 credits of Mathematical and Technological Literacy will replace one course from any one of the six Learning Domains with the second course in the sequence (LSP 121), as long as they take at least one course in each domain.

Arts and Literature: 8 quarter hours required.

Philosophical Inquiry: 8 quarter hours required.

Religious Dimensions: 8 quarter hours required; 4 quarter hours in Religious and Ethical Questions, and 4 quarter hours in Religious Traditions.

Scientific Inquiry: 12 quarter hours required; 4 quarter hours with a lab component, 4 quarter hours with a quantitative component, and 4 quarter hours in a scientific inquiry elective; at most, two courses from the same department or program.

Core Requirements

The Bachelor of Arts in Communication Studies

Commencing in the Fall of 2008, the College of Communication will offer a variety of courses leading to a Bachelor of Arts degree in Communication Studies. The program explores effective and participatory communication in interpersonal, small group, public, organizational, intercultural rhetorical and performative contexts. Through a blend of theory and practice, students are encouraged to think, speak, and write clearly; to develop confidence and ability as ethical communicators; to view communication events from multiple perspectives; to understand the multicultural character of communication in contemporary society; to analyze and evaluate variables operating in verbal transactions; to probe the basic problems of human communication in order to understand self, others, and events; and to recognize the connections between communication studies and other disciplines.

Students whose professional goals are in the public, private, or non-profit sectors, such as government, corporations training and human resources, and social and human services are well served by relational, group, and organizational communication, as well as courses in communication and culture, performance studies, and rhetoric. In addition, the B.A. in Communication Studies prepares students who want to continue their education, to excel in academic or professional graduate programs.

Degree Program Requirements

Key Changes over former track-based curriculum (Communication Major) ÷ Merger of Relational, Group, Organizational Communication track with Culture and Communication track; name change to Communication Studies.
No change in common core course requirements.

Two new required courses for the major: one fulfilling a method requirement, the other a presentation requirement. CMN 291: Research Methods had been a track requirement for students pursuing Relational, Group and Organizational Communication; CMN 220: Public Speaking or CMN 230: Performance of Literature had been required of students taking the Culture and Communication track. These classes now figure among a list of classes that fulfill the method and presentation requirement for the major in communication studies.

Updated course offerings.

The Communication Studies Major

Communication Studies majors must complete the three core courses required of all College of Communication students. In addition, they must take seven classes from among the Communication Studies course offerings. One of these must be a methods course, another must be a presentation class, and of the seven, five must be 300-level courses. Communication Studies majors must also take any three electives within the College of Communication. All Communication Studies majors must complete a total of 13 classes, or 52 credit hours.

Common Core

Three core courses are required of all College of Communication students: CMN 101, Introduction to Human Communication CMN 102 (formerly CMN 110), Introduction to Mass Communication CMN 103 (formerly CMN 203), Intercultural Communication

Students are encouraged to complete all three prior to taking additional coursework in the major.

Method Requirement

All Communication Studies majors are required to take one communication methods course. Students may choose from the following selection of methods classes:

- CMNS 291 (formerly CMN 291), Research Methods
- CMNS 331, Communication Fieldwork
- CMNS 310 (formerly CMN 310), Discourse Analysis
- CMNS 321 (formerly CMN 321), Cultural and Symbolic Criticism
- CMNS 332, Topics in Communication Methodology

Presentation Requirement

All Communication Studies majors must take one presentation skills course from the following selection of classes:

- CMNS 220 (formerly CMN 220), Public Speaking
- CMNS 230 (formerly CMN 230), Performance of Literature
- CMNS 322 (formerly CMN 322), Advanced Public Speaking (prerequisite CMNS 220, or permission)
- CMNS 330 (formerly CMN 330), Topics in Performance
- CMNS 354 (formerly CMN 354), Interviewing
- CMNS 306, Topics in Presentation

Electives in Communication Studies

Communication Studies majors must take an additional five courses from the list of offerings below.

- CMNS 205 (formerly CMN 205), Communication, Culture and Community
- CMNS 211 (formerly CMN 211), Interpersonal Communication
- CMNS 212 (formerly CMN 212), Small Group Communication
- CMNS 220 (formerly CMN 220), Public Speaking

Electives in Communication Studies (cont.)

- CMNS 221 (formerly CMN 221), Christian Preaching as Communication
CMNS 230 (formerly CMN 230), Performance of Literature
CMNS 251 (formerly CMN 251), Organizational Communication

College of Communication Electives

Students majoring in Communication Studies may take as many as three electives from any College of Communication offerings.

Internship Credit

Students in the major may take CMN 294, Communication Internship or CMN 394, Advanced Communication Internship (when placement relates to the major) for credit. In order to take CMN 294, or CMN 394, students must have completed the three communication core courses (CMN 101, CMN 102, CMN 103), two courses in the chosen major and have fulfilled internship program eligibility requirements.

Unrestricted Electives
Students complete the bachelor's degree in Communication Studies by taking an additional 56 quarter hours selected from any courses offered by DePaul University.

Course Descriptions

CMN 101 Introduction to Human Communication
This core course is required of all majors in the College of Communication. The class provides an introduction to the field of relational, group, and organizational communication. Students become acquainted with the basic terms, concepts and theoretical perspectives used to examine communication in dyadic, group, and organizational contexts.

CMN 102 Introduction to Media Communication (formerly CMN 110)
This course offers students a broad overview of the mass media (print, film, video, recorded music, radio, television and the internet) with a particular focus on how these media impact our everyday lives. Students will develop critical frameworks for understanding how power operates across the media spheres of production, circulation, representation and reception. Attention is placed on how the social categories of race, class, gender, sexuality, ethnicity, age and nationality inform each of these media spheres. The course also considers how recent developments in digital technologies, media convergence and globalization have transformed our media culture.

CMN 103 Intercultural Communication (formerly CMN 203)
This course is required for all majors in the College of Communication. The class explores issues pertaining to communication and culture. Here, we consider the important role of context (social/political, historical, and interpersonal) in cultural interactions. Specifically, we examine the complex relationship between culture and communication from three conceptual perspectives: the social/psychological, the interpretive, and the critical.

CMNS 205, Communication, Culture, and Community
Examines the relationships among culture, communication, institutions, and public and private life. Students explore the possibilities and problems of contemporary forms of community through service in community organizations. The course also fulfills the junior year experiential learning requirement through community based service learning.

CMNS 211, Interpersonal Communication
An introduction to the factors that shape communication between two people. Topics include self-concept formation, perception, message formation, verbal and nonverbal communication, active listening, and defensiveness.

CMNS 212, Small Group Communication
A survey of the variables operating in group interactions. Combines principles with practice through participation in small group experiences. Topics include group formation, group formats, organizational approaches, decision-making models, group observation and evaluation.

CMNS 220, Public Speaking
Introduction to the skills required in a variety of public speaking settings. Includes units on delivery, language, defining speech purposes and content, finding supporting material, organization, and audience analysis. Students will be required to present speeches. Background in basic writing and library skills is necessary.

CMNS 221, Christian Preaching as Communication
Rooted in Catholic tradition but inclusive of the call for all Christians to proclaim the Good News. This class explores preaching as a graced communication and, in addition to transactional and theological communication theory, examines the preacher's: call, spiritual formation, present mandates and future potentials, scripture study fundamentals and presentational approaches. The course provides opportunities for in-class, on-campus, and off-campus preaching and observation experiences as well as listener feedback and diversity education.
CMNS 230, Performance of Literature
Introduction to the communication of literature through oral interpretation. Involves critical analyses of selected literary works and preparation for and delivery of short performances.

CMNS 251, Organizational Communication
This course focuses on the role of communication in organizational life. Attention will be devoted to exploring how communication simultaneously shapes and is shaped by organizations. Topics include conflict and mediation, stress and social support, the supervisor-subordinate relationships, workplace diversity, organizational consultation and new communication technologies in organizations.

CMNS 291, Research Methods
This course is an introduction to the study of communication through the observation and analysis of empirical (i.e. aspects of the observable world) data. It will stress how to form appropriate questions from the theories (or hunches, dreams etc.) and rigorously test these propositions (quantitatively and qualitatively) to see how well they correspond to the world outside ourselves. An added benefit of the course will be to show how to be a more informed judge of the claims of others. The format of the course is lecture/discussion.

CMNS 306, Topics in Presentation
Courses offer advanced analysis of presentational forms. Students will enact presentational theories in relational, small group, or public communication contexts.

CMNS 307, Topics in Social and Political Discourse
Examines intensively one or more issues in the Culture and Communication Track. The topics differ each term focusing on a particular area of discourse such as environmental communication, political communication, and sexuality and communication.

CMNS 308, Topics in Cultural Discourse
Examination of the application of linguistic and rhetorical theories to various specializations in cultural discourse. The course focuses each term on one particular area such as semiotics, language acquisition, or language and power.

CMNS 309, International/Global Communication
Focuses on the world of international/global news flow and media systems in a comparative manner. Emphasizes changes that have followed the modernization of the media, the impact of globalization on individual countries, attempts to preserve the cultural character of domestic media content in the face of increased amounts of imported products, and the effects of new communication technologies, particularly the Internet.

CMNS 310, Discourse Analysis
An analytical examination of the ways in which people locate meaning cooperate, coordinate, and find coherency in conversations and in other forms of discourse, both spoken and written. The class will analyze and disclose meanings hidden in public discourse.

CMNS 311, Topics in Interpersonal/Relational Communication
Explores specialized topic within the field of interpersonal communication. Past topics have included: emotions & communication, gender & its relation to interaction, the "social construction" of interpersonal realities, etc.

CMNS 313, Nonverbal Communication

Course Descriptions

CMN 101 Introduction to Human Communication
This core course is required of all majors in the College of Communication. The class provides an introduction to the field of relational, group, and organizational communication. Students become acquainted with the basic terms, concepts and theoretical perspectives used to examine communication in dyadic, group, and organizational contexts.

CMN 102 Introduction to Mass Communication (formerly CMN 110)
This course offers students a broad overview of the mass media (print, film, video, recorded music, radio, television and the internet) with a particular focus on how these media impact our everyday lives. Students will develop critical frameworks for understanding how power operates across the media spheres of production, circulation, representation and reception. Attention is placed on how the social categories of race, class, gender, sexuality, ethnicity, age and nationality inform each of these media spheres. The course also considers how recent developments in digital technologies, media convergence and globalization have transformed our media culture.

CMN 103 Intercultural Communication (formerly CMN 203)
This course is required is required for all majors in the College of Communication. The class explores issues pertaining to communication and culture. Here, we consider the important role of context (social/political, historical, and interpersonal) in cultural interactions. Specifically, we examine the complex relationship between culture and communication from three conceptual perspectives: the social/psychological, the interpretive, and the critical.

JOUR 240 Broadcast Journalism
This course teaches students the preparation and presentation skills needed in broadcast journalism. It is a studio performance course in which students research, write, and then anchor news and public affairs reports. The course teaches basic strategies in how to organize and present material for broadcast. Students complete the course with a heightened self-awareness of what it takes to be a professional in studio settings and in public presentations. (Prereq: JOUR 275; JOUR 330).

JOUR 245 News Editing
Behind every news story worth reading or watching is a highly skilled news editor, whose careful work helps to provide the clarity and emotional force that makes for memorable journalism. This course teaches students those skills. It introduces them to the many roles news editors play from choosing what stories will be written to how they're presented. In the online world, the news editor plays an increasingly important role in the production of stories that encourage interactivity with readers and the development of value-added content utilizing multimedia platforms. (Prereq: JOUR 275).

JOUR 275 Introduction to Journalism
This course introduces students to the rapidly changing field of journalism and gives them a firm grounding in the researching, interviewing, writing, and rewriting skills they'll need to be successful in the profession. The course teaches students how to organize information and present it in a thoughtful, clear narrative under deadline. Students will explore the impact new technologies are having on news gathering and dissemination and how the professional values and business imperatives of news organizations influence what stories are reported and how they are reported.

JOUR 276 Photojournalism
This course is designed to introduce students to photography as a means of telling stories and revealing important aspects of the human condition. Photography is both an art and science and in the hands of a skilled photojournalist can have a profound effect in fulfilling the social responsibility of journalists to society. Students will learn the techniques and ethics of picture-taking and will develop an appreciation for photojournalism’s proud past and digital future. No previous photographic experience is assumed or required for this class. Students taking the course will develop photo-essay projects that will become strong portfolio pieces.

JOUR 279 Feature Writing
Feature stories tend to emphasize human interest and are filled with the descriptive detail that connects readers and viewers to lived experiences. Students will be introduced to the process of how news organizations identify good feature story opportunities, and how reporters proceed from an idea to a finely crafted feature story. Students will develop the critical skills of personal observation that is behind successful feature writing. At the heart of this process is intellectual curiosity, which connects the experience of an individual or group to individuals who will read your work. (Prereq: JOUR 275).

JOUR 330 Writing for Broadcast
This course introduces students to the writing and formatting requirements of broadcast journalists. Part of this instruction is to give students an understanding of how writing for broadcast differs from writing for print and the awareness it takes to write copy that supports and strengthens the visuals that viewers will be watching. Strong writing is the backbone of broadcast journalism, and this course gives students a firm foundation in the writing skills that produce broadcast stories worth watching. (Prereq: JOUR 275).

JOUR 343 Journalism and the American Experience
This course examines the significance that journalism has had in shaping the American experience and the difference that it has made in the evolution of our national history and culture. Particular attention is paid to major developments in the American experience and the role that journalists have played not only in reporting but in shaping those events, including the American Revolution, the Civil War, and Americas encounter with urbanization, industrialization, and modernity. Also analyzed is the impact of technology ---the telegraph, broadcasting, cable, satellite, and the internet---on news gathering.

JOUR 350 Radio News
Nowhere has the rise of new technologies had a greater impact than in radio reporting. This course gives students opportunities to stream their stories through field and studio productions that connect listeners within communities and around the world. Students will be trained in writing for the ear, and the unique local and international possibilities of radio reporting.

JOUR 361 The Press, the Law, and Democracy
This course examines the unique role of the press in providing the information that makes democracy possible. Students will learn the ethical and legal obligations of the reporter and news organizations and the impact that new technologies are having on news gathering and dissemination. The course aims at enhancing student understanding of the social responsibility of journalists in the public life of the nation and its citizens.

JOUR 362 The Press and the Presidency
The purpose of this class is to give students an understanding of the current and historic relationship between the press and the American presidency. Students will analyze conditions in peace and war that lead to cooperative or adversarial press-presidential relations. Particular attention will be paid to the role of the press in presidential campaigns, in the agenda-setting function of the press, and the part it plays in forming public opinion.

JOUR 363 Online Journalism I
This course equips students with the storytelling tools they’ll need to add value to their reporting for online readers. Students will be introduced to the techniques of non-linear story design that are increasingly necessary in the digital world of journalism. Final projects will include in-depth reporting told through multimedia. (Prereq: JOUR 275).

JOUR 364 Investigative Reporting
This course explores the methods, strategies, and sources that are deployed in in-depth investigative journalism as well as its social and policy impact. Students will learn how to use public records, documents, and interviews to develop stories that help shape public opinion and policymaking on major urban issues of our time. Students will work individually and in teams in acquiring information from archives, agencies, community leaders, and public officials that is in the best tradition of the social responsibility of the press.

JOUR 365 Television News I
This course teaches students how to produce television news stories. Student teams will write and produce story packages that include stand-up reports, interviews, and voice-overs. Students will rotate between assignments—learning how to shoot video, run audio, edit, interview, research, and report—news stories worth knowing.
(Prereq: JOUR 275; JOUR 330).

JOUR 366 Magazine Reporting
The digital world of reporting and editing has created unparalleled opportunities to reach specific readers with targeted stories. This course introduces students to the opportunities of magazine writing and the strategies used by magazine writers. Writing assignments will strengthen a student's grasp of the resources available to modern magazine writers and the techniques of research and interviewing that are the basis of skilled storytelling.

JOUR 367 International Reporting
This course analyzes the impact new technologies and the War on Terror are having on foreign correspondents and international reporting. The digital revolution is having a profound effect on the ability of news makers and organizations to compete with governments in worldwide information flows. Access to information has made citizens more inter-dependent while creating extraordinary opportunities for journalists to tell stories that increase the understanding and enlarge the imagination of their readers.

JOUR 368 Sports Reporting
Sports reporting is a go-to destination for online, print, and broadcast consumers of sports information. This course gives students an understanding of the social and cultural significance of sports. It trains them to look for themes and details that go beyond the simple score of a contest to the symbolic importance of athletics in the post-modern experience. Students will complete the course with a new appreciation for what makes for strong sports reporting and what accounts for its unique hold on the popular imagination.

JOUR 374 Community Journalism
One of the largest areas of readership growth and jobs in journalism is professionally delivering community news. This course focuses on the unique opportunities of serving citizens through reporting that captures the concerns and triumphs of diverse urban and suburban communities. It enables reporters to develop sources and report on beats of real interest to a wide readership.
(Prereq: JOUR 275).

JOUR 377 Journalism Topics
This course allows students to sample a range of topical offerings in journalism that have included press law and ethics, arts and entertainment reporting, business and finance reporting, science and technology reporting, health and medicine reporting, tabloid journalism, war reporting, and reporting religion and moral issues. (Prereq: JOUR 275).

JOUR 378 Advanced Reporting
This course is designed to go beyond the inverted pyramid of basic news writing and introduce students to more sophisticated news gathering techniques used by journalists. The course critically examines the interviewing strategies and detective work involved in first rate reporting. Students will learn how databases and documents can strengthen a story, as well as surveys, field experiments, and participant observation. The class will be particularly alert to how these techniques are used by the mainstream press in reporting the most important news of the day.
(Prereq: JOUR 275).

JOUR 383 Online Journalism II
This course builds on what students learned in Online Journalism I in news gathering and dissemination. Particular attention is paid to the incorporation of digital video and sound in reporting. A final project will include the development of a website made up of stories and sections that use interactivity and multimedia platforms to encourage citizen participation in the process of reporting. (Prereq: JOUR 275).

JOUR 385*, Television News II
Television News II builds on the knowledge students have gained in our introductory Television News class in producing news packages for broadcast. Student teams in this course will develop longer format feature pieces that combine skills in writing, reporting, shooting, narration, editing, and producing. The best of this work should serve as portfolio pieces for students considering careers in broadcasting and related industries. A prerequisite of TV News I and Writing for Broadcast needs to be placed on the course. (Prereq: JOUR 365).

CMN 294: Communication Internship
Course places students in business, industry, or not-for-profit general communication internships; opportunities; opportunities in advertising, public relations, journalism, radio and television, museums, and philanthropic outreach organizations. Program open to communication majors and minors who meet eligibility requirements.

CMN 394: Advanced Communication Internship
Placement of students in business, industry, or not-for-profit major specific internships. Opportunities in advertising, public relations, journalism, radio and television, museums and philanthropic outreach organizations. Program open to communication majors and minors who meet eligibility requirements.

Core Requirements

The Bachelor of Arts in Public Relations and Advertising

Commencing in the Fall of 2008, the College of Communication will offer a variety of courses leading to a Bachelor of Arts degree in Public Relations and Advertising. The program examines theories and practices in the related fields of public relations and advertising, and considers advertising and public relations processes, products and effects from cultural, ethical, organizational, historical, creative and methodological perspectives. Students in Public Relations and Advertising studies learn to think critically and analytically, to develop ideas clearly, and to speak and write effectively. Within the broad context of human communication and the liberal arts, students explore the relationship of public relations and advertising activities to other aspects of human endeavor. Graduates are prepared for entry level positions within the public and private sectors, or for continuing their education in academic or professional graduate programs.

College of Communication Electives
Students majoring in Public Relations and Advertising may take as many as two electives from any College of Communication offerings. Students should consult their advisors regarding courses offered in the current College of Communication course schedule particularly relevant for Public Relations and Advertising Studies.

Internship Credit
Students in the major may take CMN 294, Communication Internship or CMN 394, Advanced Communication Internship (when placement relates to the major) for credit. In order to take CMN 294, or CMN 394, students must have completed the three communication core courses (CMN 101, CMN 102, CMN 103) two courses in the chosen major and have fulfilled internship program eligibility requirements.

Unrestricted Electives
Students complete the bachelors degree in Public Relations and Advertising by taking an additional 56 quarter hours selected from any courses offered by DePaul University.

Course Descriptions

PRAD 244 Principles of Advertising
This foundational course examines the principles, practices, applications and standards of advertising in multiple contexts, both from the perspectives of the practitioner and the consumer. The course places particular emphasis on strategic thinking in all aspects of marketing communication.

PRAD 255 Principles of Public Relations
This introduction to public relations traces the development of public relations industries and practices. Students are introduced to theories and principles of public relations, along with the roles and responsibilities of professionals working in public relations and related disciplines. Students also examine industry regulations, societal implications, and strategic planning processes associated with public relations.

PRAD 256 Writing For Public Relations and Advertising
This class provides students the opportunity to apply public relations and advertising theories and principles to the development of media materials. This course familiarizes students with various forms of persuasive writing and requires them to develop a writing portfolio that demonstrates their ability to write for diverse audiences. Assignments include writing plans, news media kits, speeches, and executions in various media. Prerequisite(s): PRAD 244 or PRAD 255.

PRAD 334 Ethics in Public Relations and Advertising
This course explores ethical issues of public relations and advertising from both theoretical and practical perspectives. Students learn the professional and social responsibilities of Public Relations and Advertising professionals and prevailing norms in public relations, advertising, and related disciplines. Prerequisite(s): PRAD 244 or PRAD 255.

PRAD 335 Advertising and Society
This course challenges students to think critically about the social effect of advertising with regard to its role in the production and maintenance of consumer culture and formation of public opinion. Students read widely from a body of social criticism concerned with practices that may diminish democracy and endanger our collective public life. This course asks future practitioners to confront issues and abuses of advertising and to understand the negative social consequences that can result. Prerequisite(s): PRAD 244 or PRAD 255.

PRAD 336 Advertising Campaigns
This class is designed to expose students to the use and development of advertising strategies and techniques in a variety of product and service categories. Through case studies students examine contemporary examples of successful advertising programs and campaigns and through implementation projects discover how practitioners function within marketing communication organizations. Prerequisite: PRAD 244. (Formerly CMN 337 Public Communication Campaigns, check with instructor if content covered matches content take in CMN 337).

PRAD 337 Public Relations Campaigns
The class is designed to expose students to the use and development of public relations strategies and techniques in a variety of functions, including community relations, employee relations, government relations, and media relations. Through case studies students examine contemporary examples of successful public relations programs and campaigns and through implementation projects discover how practitioners function as intermediates between organizations and their publics. Prerequisite: PRAD 255. (Formerly CMN 337 Public Communication Campaigns, check with instructor if content covered matches content take in CMN 337).

PRAD 338 Healthcare and Public Relations
This course familiarizes students with the major issues and problems in the United States healthcare system. Students will explore current issues in health policy and the politics of health from a public relations perspective. Each student will be responsible for assuming the role of a public relations director for a health organization in the public or private sector. Prerequisite(s): PRAD 244 or PRAD 255

PRAD 339 Integrated Communication Campaigns
This class is designed to expose students to the use and development of public integrated marketing communication strategies and techniques in a variety of product and service categories. Through case studies students examine contemporary examples of successful integrated marketing communication programs and campaigns and through implementation projects discover how integrated marketing communication practitioners function within marketing communication organizations. Prerequisite(s): PRAD 244 or PRAD 255. (Formerly CMN 337 Public Communication Campaigns, check with instructor if content covered matches content take in CMN 337).

PRAD 375 Communication Law
This course is designed to provide students with an introduction to the portions of U.S. Law that defines the scope of First Amendment protection for communication activities. The goal of the course is to help students understand legal issues important to professionals in the media-related fields of advertising, journalism, public relations and other communication specialties. The course helps students understand both their rights to communicate in political and commercial environment and the restrictions permitted on certain communication activities. Prerequisite(s): PRAD 244, PRAD 255, or CMN 103.

PRAD 378 Creativity in Advertising
This course focuses on creative processes critical to advertising planning, program implementation and organizational leadership. Overall, the course is designed to help students think more creatively, no matter what their specific goals may be. Readings include case studies and guides to creative processes in advertising, as well as more personal essays by people working in other creative venues. Class assignments direct students in different ways to strengthen their creative abilities. Prerequisite: PRAD 244.

PRAD 376 Crisis Communication
This course examines how nonprofit, government and corporate organizations can effectively manage crises. Topics covered include: the nature of organizational crises; effective crisis communication planning, response and recovery; managing relationships with the community, government, and media during crises; and the potential ethical and legal problems crisis communicators face. Emphasis will be placed on analyzing current crisis case studies and learning how to plan for and respond to crises through simulated crisis situations. Prerequisite: PRAD 255

PRAD 377 Marketing Public Relations
This course explores the strategic use of public relations to attain marketing objectives. Marketing Public Relations (MPR) is an important part of a reputation building or product branding effort for a corporation, and it can also be a valuable strategy for government agencies and non-profit organizations. Lectures and projects will demonstrate ways to use public relations strategically to add value to integrated marketing programs. Student teams will apply this knowledge to solve real-world marketing problems. By the end of the course, teams will prepare and present key aspects of a marketing public relations plan to a client. Prerequisite PRAD 255

PRAD 379 Advertising Media Planning
This course examines the diverse capabilities of various media available to advertisers and the process by which advertising media plans are constructed to help meet marketing communication objectives for a product or service. The course provides fundamentals on the language, tools, research methods and concepts employed in the media planning process and helps students build media plans using appropriate objectives, strategies and tactics. The course will help students develop a heightened appreciation for the roles of logic, analysis, and insight in the media buying
PRAD 380 Political Communication
This course examines how various U.S. government agencies, jurisdictions, and politicians communicate with the public and how the public influences the government through communication. Topics covered include: theory, strategies, and tactics behind effective government and political communication; how to critically evaluate government and political communication; and how individuals and groups influence the government and politicians through communication. Prerequisite: PRAD 244 or PRAD 255.

PRAD 381 Advertising and Children
This course examines the social and behavioral effects of advertising directed to children, and addresses such topics as what children know and think about advertising, how children respond emotionally to advertising, how advertising can affect behavioral patterns, the changing regulatory environment and related social and psychological issues including materialism and self-esteem. Students will have the opportunity to assess the existing environment and to design creative interventions.

PRAD 382 Nonprofit Public Relations
This course examines the unique challenges and opportunities communicators face in the nonprofit sector. Topics covered include: nonprofit management and culture; community, media and government relations; capacity building, fundraising and grant writing; crisis communication skills for nonprofit communicators; and legal and ethical concerns for nonprofit communicators. Prerequisite: PRAD 255

PRAD 392 Special Topics in Advertising .

Core Requirements

The Bachelor of Arts in Media and Cinema Studies
Commencing in the Fall of 2008, the College of Communication will offer a variety of courses leading to a Bachelor of Arts degree in Media and Cinema Studies. The BA in Media and Cinema Studies strategically combines the faculty expertise, curricula and facilities of media areas in Communication, CTI (e.g., Digital Cinema), and other University units to provide students with the critical frameworks, creative opportunities and technological expertise to become socially responsible leaders in the growing and converging areas of multimedia. The major combines a rich course selection in four areas of study: film, radio, tv, and new media. Coursework combines theory and critical analysis with production courses taught at both the Lincoln Park (e.g., radio) and Loop campuses (e.g., television/video or cinema).

Key Changes over former track-based curriculum (Communication Major)
- Program name change from Radio, TV, Film to Media and Cinema Studies.
- No change in common core course requirements.
- Three new Media and Cinema Studies program requirements (MCS 271 Media and Cultural Studies; MCS 273 Film/Video Analysis; and DC 200 Media Literacies) in lieu of the Radio, TV, Film track requirement, CMN 271: Intro to Radio, TV, Film.
- Two concentration options within Media and Cinema Studies: Cinema Studies concentration; and Radio, TV and New Media concentration.
- In the track-based program, Radio, TV, Film students needed to take two History, two Criticism, and two Production courses to fulfill track content requirements. The content requirements for the concentrations proposed here are virtually identical. In addition to the MCS core requirements, students will need to take four History/Criticism courses and one Production course.
- Media and Cinema Studies majors are allowed two electives in the College of Communication.
- Students in the major are allowed to count specific courses in Digital Cinema, Animation, and Art, toward their degree.
- Amplified course sequences and updated course offerings.
The Media and Cinema Studies Major

In addition to the three core College of Communication courses, students take three Media and Cinema Studies core courses, four classes from the History/Criticism area, one class from the Production area, and two electives from any of the programs in the College of Communication or Digital Cinema. Instead of completing a general degree in Media and Cinema Studies, students may choose from two Program Concentrations (Cinema Studies; Radio, TV and New Media) to guide their selection of courses. All Media and Cinema Studies majors must complete a total of 13 classes, or 52 credit hours. Common Core

Three core courses are required of all College of Communication students:

College of Communication Electives

Students pursuing any of the concentrations in Media and Cinema Studies may take two additional electives from any College of Communication or Digital Cinema offerings.

Internship Credit

Students in the major may take CMN 294, Communication Internship or CMN 394, Advanced Communication Internship (when placement relates to the major) for credit. In order to take CMN 294, or CMN 394, students must have completed the three communication core courses (CMN 101, CMN 102, CMN 103) two courses in the chosen major and have fulfilled internship program eligibility requirements.

Unrestricted Electives

Students complete the bachelor's degree in Media and Cinema Studies by taking an additional 56 quarter hours selected from any courses offered by DePaul University.

Course Descriptions

ANI 101 Animation
Course introduces a variety of basic animation techniques for cinema and gaming, such as hand-drawn, cutout, stop-motion and (very basic) 3D, with an emphasis on the use of computer technology. Examples of diverse animation genres and styles (experimental, cartoon, anime, special effects, computer games) from different cultures will be screened and discussed. Students will explore the unique qualities of the medium through a series of hands-on projects that can be adapted to their own personal interests. They will learn about professional animation process (storyboard and animatic) during the production of a final project that encourages them to consider the role and potential of animation in our society.

ANI 105 Motion Design
This course introduces the basic concepts of design for time-based digital media. Students study the principles of composition and color theory, and how these are affected by movement, duration and display. Vector and bitmap manipulation tools are explored in movement, duration and display. Vector and bitmap manipulation tools are explored in relation to game design, video and Internet production.

ART 291 Art and Social Interaction: Documentary Video
Topics in the relationship between art and community action.

ART 328 Documentary Photography
Exploration of photographic concepts and techniques used in artistic, journalistic and sociological documentation.

CMN 101 Introduction to Human Communication
This core course is required of all majors in the College of Communication. The class provides an introduction to the field of relational, group, and organizational communication. Students become acquainted with the basic terms, concepts and theoretical perspectives used to examine communication in dyadic, group, and organizational contexts.

CMN 102 Introduction to Media Communication (formerly CMN 110)
This course offers students a broad overview of the mass media (print, film, video, recorded music, radio, television and the internet) with a particular focus on how these media impact our everyday lives. Students will develop critical frameworks for understanding how power operates across the media spheres of production, circulation, representation and reception. Attention is placed on how the social categories of race, class, gender, sexuality, ethnicity, age and nationality inform each of these media spheres. The course also considers how recent developments in digital technologies, media convergence and globalization have transformed our media culture.

CMN 103 Intercultural Communication (formerly CMN 203)
This course is required for all majors in the College of Communication. The class explores issues pertaining to communication and culture. Here, we consider the important role of context (social/political, historical, and interpersonal) in cultural interactions. Specifically, we examine the complex relationship between culture and communication from three conceptual perspectives: the social/psychological, the interpretive, and the critical.

JOUR 276 Photojournalism
Introduction to the theoretical and technical foundations of photography with exploration of the medium's aesthetic, documentary and narrative purposes.

CMNS 309 International/Global Communication
Focuses on the world of international/global news flow and media systems in a comparative manner. Emphasizes changes that have followed the modernization of the media, the impact of globalization on individual countries, attempts to preserve the cultural character of domestic media content in the face of increased amounts of imported products, and the effects of new communication technologies, particularly the Internet.

CMNS 337, Asian American Media Representations
Critically examines how Asian Americans have been represented in historical and contemporary media texts. Students explore the social construction of Asian Americans from selected films, TV shows, and print media and how these media constructions have affected Asian Americans self-perceived identity and perpetuated stereotypes, prejudice, and racism against Asian Americans in the United States. The course takes an interdisciplinary approach in the analysis of the media images and explores issues of power, identity, race, gender, class, sexual orientation and the interaction of these factors in the representation of Asian Americans.

CMNS 366 Communication, Technology, & Society
Survey of a variety of contemporary and historical issues related to the introduction and diffusion of communication technologies in society. Especially examines how new technologies, particularly the Internet, are transforming the communication landscape. Emphasis on issues of intellectual property, surveillance, privacy, regulation, message construction, and access will be a central component of the course.

JOUR 377 Topics in Journalism: Literary Journalism
This course explores a history of literary journalism, paying special attention to the unique
This course explores a history of literary journalism, paying special attention to the unique intersections of process and product in this form of cultural reporting. Students will read the work of literary journalists and write a literary piece that could be published in a literary magazine or Internet site.

DC 200 Media Literacies
This course is designed to help students develop an informed, critical and practical understanding of new communication media, including ways to read, write and produce in a digital environment. We will explore implications of these technologies and their uses in schools, communities, and workplaces. The course also focuses on practices involving current and future technologies that hold promise for the creation and distribution of all media.

DC 201 Introduction to Screenwriting
This course focuses on narrative storytelling and encourages students to find their unique voices, while emphasizing the critical importance of working as part of a creative team. Emphasis is placed on telling a story in terms of action and the reality of characters in cinema, animation and gaming. The difference between the literary and visual medium is explored through individual writing projects and group analysis. In addition, the nature of the interactive story will be examined focusing on the differences as well as the similarities between gaming and the other narrative forms.

DC 210 Digital Cinema Production I
A beginning workshop in digital cinematic expression, this course deals with grammar and construction of visual storytelling through editing materials and through learning simple scripting and storyboarding. Use of a mini DV camera as well as basic editing software is taught, and students shoot projects of increasing complexity while learning to use the medium to tell a visual story with a point.

DC 215 Digital Sound Design
This course examines the place of sound in cinema, both artistic and technological. The course will cover the basics of sound, microphones, and analogue-to-digital conversion. Lectures, readings, and film clips will be used to illustrate the language of film sound, as practiced by film directors, sound designers, and editors. Students will learn to edit sound assignments with Pro Tools and other appropriate technologies.

DC 220 Editing I
Students analyze and assemble dramatic scenes under a variety of conditions and narrative strategies. Editing theories, techniques and procedures, issues of continuity, effects, movement and sound are examined as they relate to the fundamentals of cinematic montage and visual storytelling.

DC 271 Introduction to Television Production
This course provides basic studio exercises and productions where the students become familiar with the tools of the medium and the processes involved in the creation of complete television programs. Emphasis is placed on understanding the role that software and hardware play in the structuring of visual and sound to communicate through television. The focus is on finding, writing, editing and delivering media content.

DC 272 Writing for Television
The primary objective of this course is to learn how to write for television, for both network and cable, focusing on fiction and non-fiction TV programs including news, talk, documentaries, dramas and comedies. The course will assist students in improving their writing skills as well as help them understand the basic approaches and techniques in writing for television.

DC 275 Cinematography and Lighting
Course gives students working knowledge of DV and HD camera equipment and lighting. Operation and maintenance procedures are specified for each camera. The duties of the camera assistant and operator are also covered. Course introduces basic cinema and animation lighting techniques for students with little or no studio lighting experience.
Students become familiar with the uses of standard pieces of lighting equipment, and important safety procedures. The role of grip and gaffer on the movie set is also explored. Special attention will be given to important light measuring techniques including use of the spot meter. Course encourages intelligent, thoughtful approaches to lighting and cinematography based on dramatic structure and script.

DC 280 Storytelling with Machinima
The course will focus on two areas: the craft and technology of Machinima filmmaking and the use of Machinima in storytelling. Within the context of learning the craft of Machinima, students will explore character and character development, production design, and the fundamentals of visual storytelling.

DC 301 Advanced Screenwriting I
In this course, students study, analyze and produced motion picture scripts. This course emphasizes the use of traditional storytelling, classic mythology and how these devices apply to contemporary screenplays. Students will move from concept/treatment to a completed first act of a feature length screenplay of their own.

DC 310 Digital Cinema Production II
This class presents a variety of topics and experiences that are designed to broaden the student's understanding of the art of cinematic storytelling and montage. Work on more advanced projects is integrated into the class as a means to understanding of advanced editing tools and techniques.

DC 371 Documentary Production
This course uses hands-on projects to explore each step in the process of documentary filmmaking. Inherent to the study are technical considerations, such as lighting and handheld spontaneous style and editing the complex structure of the documentary.

DC 372 Topics in TV Production
This course is a hands-on experience in television production of news and public affairs programs. Students learn through theory and practice the role TV Producers and their teams play in creating various TV programs.

LST 300 Topics in Latin American Studies: Documentary in the Americas
This course explores the various forms and functions of documentary in Latin American countries and created by Latin American documentary filmmakers and videomakers.

MCS 207 History of Cinema I, 1890-1945 (cross-listed with DC 207 and ART 302)
This course examines the history of cinema as one of the most influential cultural forms of the 20th Century. We will study the aesthetic and technological developments of cinema during its first 50 years, as well as examine the social and economic factors shaping its history. Initially influenced by other art forms—theater, literature, painting—filmmaking quickly acquired its own formal system, language, and traditions. We will trace the changing styles, techniques, content, and methods of filmmaking as an art form, as popular culture, and as an industry. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 208 History of Cinema II, 1945-1975 (cross-listed with DC 208 and ART 302)
This course covers the continued rise and development of cinema from 1945 to 1975. The course will have a dual focus, looking simultaneously at both the American studio system and international cinemas. The lectures, screenings, and discussions place equal emphasis on charting the development of cinematic techniques as well as examining the growth of specific national cinemas. In addition, the course surveys international stylistic trends in narrative, documentary, and avant-garde film. Students will acquire a broad understanding of the institutional, social, technological, and aesthetic forces that have shaped the development of cinema during the mid-twentieth century. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 209 History of Cinema III, 1975-present (cross-listed with DC 209 and ART 302)
This final course in the film history sequence is designed to introduce students to a sense of modern film history and the multiple permutations of cinema around the globe. It presents film history from a global perspective, concentrating primarily on the development of new national and transnational cinemas. The course continues to chart the development of the American studios since the mid-1970s while examining the effects of media consolidation and convergence. Moreover, the course seeks to examine how global cinemas have reacted to and dealt with the formal influence and economic domination of Hollywood filmmaking on international audiences. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 231 Introduction to Documentary Studies
This course examines the rise and growth of documentary forms, including audio, film, television, photography, literary journalism and ethnography. Students will study representative works from each documentary approach and learn to analyze the techniques of observation and representation at use in these pieces. Students will become familiar with major theoretical constructions of documentary and be able to use these analytical tools to critique documentary forms. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 271 Media and Cultural Studies
This course provides students with a theoretical and methodological background in the interdisciplinary field of cultural studies, which considers media and culture as sites for the construction and contestation of race, class, gender, ethnicity, sexuality and nation. The course provides a foundation in critical cultural studies, ideology critique, critical race and gender studies, transnational media studies and active audience studies.

MCS 273 Film/Video Analysis
This course covers basic concepts and terminology of film and video as forms of art and mass culture. This course covers the aesthetic systems that constitute film and video: plot structure, sets, costumes and makeup, acting, lighting, cinematography, editing, and sound. We consider how the interaction of these elements produces meaning in film and video. We also examine how these concepts are practiced in film and digital video production. After mastering the aesthetic concepts, students also examine their use in different modes of film communication: fiction, documentary, and the avant-garde as well as their functions in animation and gaming. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 286 Radio Practicum (prerequisite: permission of instructor)
Students who already actively participate at DePaul's radio station have the opportunity depending on the station's needs to produce on-air announcements, specialized broadcasts (weather, sports, University-based topics), newscasts, and assist station managers with their day-to-day responsibilities for MCS credit. In addition to working at the radio station, students must successfully complete a short research project on an approved topic. Students must receive instructor approval prior to registration: 1-2 credits per quarter depending on job responsibilities, 4 credits maximum prior to degree completion.

MCS 331 Topics in Documentary Studies
A rotating topics course that could focus on specific historical era or specific group of texts or documentarians from across film, television, audio, writing, photography. Courses like Feminism & Documentary, and Political Documentary fit under this heading.

MCS 339 Radio Broadcasting
The overall objectives of this course are to familiarize students with the radio broadcasting industry, the history of the medium and current issues facing broadcasters. Furthermore, we will discuss matters such as indecency, deregulation, and the many challenges that terrestrial radio is likely to face from Internet and satellite broadcasters. Additionally, we will discuss job responsibilities in the radio industry as well the day-to-day operations at radio stations. Finally, it is expected that students will be well prepared for advanced radio production and radio and television internships as a result of succeeding in this course.

MCS 341 Topics in Radio Studies
Subjects rotate among several historical and conceptual topics, such as Rock Radio, Talk Radio, Gender and Radio, Radio and American Culture, etc. Students will have the opportunity to build upon the foundations of radio that are explored in other radio courses. Radio topics courses are considered advanced study in the subject area; therefore, students are encouraged to complete MCS 339 or MCS 342 prior to taking a radio topics course.
MCS 342 History of Broadcasting
A history of radio, television, and cable that examines their relations to other media industries including programming, economics, industrial structures, audiences, government and industry policies, and social effects. The course includes viewing, analysis and criticism of significant and representative programming.

MCS 348 Topics in Film Genre
This course offers an historical examination of film genres, with a varying focus on one particular genre: film noir, musicals, melodrama, detective/gangster film, science fiction film, comedy, Western, animation, youth films. The course explores the relationship of genres to general social histories. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 349 Topics in Film Studies
Examination of a particular era of film history or national cinema, film movements, or moments in social history and their relationship to film production. Topics currently in rotation include Film Sound Studies, American Films of the 1970s, War and Film, feminist film, Psychoanalysis and Cinema, etc. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 350* Topics in Global Cinema
This course is designed as a critical study of global filmmakers and the issues surrounding cinema and its transnational circulation. The class will examine specific aspects of the growth and evolution of cinema and look at points of contact between different cultural discourses, national cinematic styles, genres, and reception. Artistic, social, political, and industrial issues will be examined to provide different models of cinematic creation and consumption. Recent topics have included Latin American Cinemas, Asian Cinemas, Transnational Cinema, New German Cinema, History of French Film, Contemporary Global Directors, etc. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 351 Topics in Television Studies
This course offers advanced study of television as a unique audio-visual culture with its own history and styles. This course presumes basic knowledge of television terms and methods of media analysis. Studies of a selected aspect of television history, television criticism, or national television are offered regularly. Recent topics have included Global Television, Reality TV, American TV of the 1950s, Television News, etc.

MCS 352 Topics in New Media
This course examines the effects of new and/or digital media on interpersonal communication, media industries, and/ or media culture. Depending on the specific focus of this variable elective course, it might focus on economic, social, political, or aesthetic implications of new media, including the Internet, interactive games, and other new media technologies and applications.

MCS 373 Audio Documentary
This course uses hands-on projects so that students can explore the steps in the process of creating an audio documentary. Through practical application students consider questions that surround the interpretation of cultural experience. Additionally, students analyze a variety of approaches to audio documentary in an effort to understand better this significant form of storytelling. There is a lab fee for this course.

MCS 383 Film Theory (prerequisite: MCS 273 or permission of instructor)
This course is designed to offer a comprehensive survey of the major theoretical approaches from the 1910s to the present. The purpose of this course is to familiarize students with a wide range of disciplines (film, art history, philosophy, psychology, etc.) and how these ideas both inflect the development of classical film theories as well as the evolution of cinema. To achieve this, you will survey key theoretical texts and integrate these readings with films shown throughout the semester. In doing so, we will try to understand the contributions of these theorists to the field of film studies as well as the intellectual movements from which they draw their ideas. Moreover, the scope of the course seeks to examine the overall process whereby theoretical discourse develops historically. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 386 Radio Production (prerequisite: MCS 286, MCS 339, or permission of instructor)
Students will learn radio broadcasting and audio production techniques. Students will work in Students will learn radio broadcasting and audio production techniques. Though the emphasis of the course will be on broadcast writing, speech, and production techniques, students will have the opportunity to perform on-air shifts at DePaul’s radio station and complete non-traditional production work, such as podcasts.

MCS 389 Topics in Media Production
This course is a rotating topic course in areas of media production and may include classes such as Podcasting, Advanced Radio Production, Advanced Audio Documentary, Radio News, Multimedia Production, etc. There may be a lab fee for the course.

MUS 208 Community Audio Art Production
This Experiential Learning course involves collaborative art production, electro-acoustic and computer music, experimental sound techniques, radio art, political music, socially engaged audio documentary, soundscape design, field recordings, sound installation, conceptual art, public service announcements, and interdisciplinary art. In addition to a historical survey of works in this genre, students will complete one group project and one solo project. This course may only be used as a free elective for students in the School of Music.

CMN 294: Communication Internship
Course places students in business, industry, or not-for-profit general communication internships; opportunities in advertising, public relations, journalism, radio and television, museums, and philanthropic outreach organizations. Program open to communication majors and minors who meet eligibility requirements.

CMN 394: Advanced Communication Internship
Placement of students in business, industry, or not-for-profit major specific internships. Opportunities in advertising, public relations, journalism, radio and television, museums and philanthropic outreach organizations. Program open to communication majors and minors who meet eligibility requirements.

College of Communication - Undergraduate Studies ▶ Degree Programs ▶ Bachelor's of Arts in Communication and Media ▶ Core Requirements

Core Requirements

The Bachelor of Arts in Communication and Media

Commencing in the Fall of 2008, the College of Communication will offer a variety of courses leading to a Bachelor of Arts degree in Communication and Media. The BA in Communication and Media offers students the opportunity to pursue coursework in communication and media that draws upon two or more related areas of study. This degree will provide flexibility for transfer students and others who have not determined their precise career trajectory, while affording them the fundamental communication and critical thinking skills needed to enter jobs across the public, private and non-profit sectors, or to continue their education in academic or professional post-graduate programs. This major is designed especially for those students holding allied field interests, as well as those who would like to complete a communication degree, by taking mostly evening courses. In order to complete this degree, College of Communication students have the option of pursuing coursework from any of the four other majors offered.

Key Changes over former track-based curriculum (Communication Major)
New major. The Communication and Media Major

Communication and Media majors must complete the three core courses required of all College of Communication students. In addition, they must take ten electives from among the College of Communication course offerings. Five of these courses must be 300-level classes. All Communication and Media majors must complete a total of 13 classes, or 52 credit hours.

Common Core

Three core courses are required of all College of Communication students:
- CMN 101, Introduction to Human Communication
- CMN 102 (formerly CMN 110), Introduction to Mass Communication
- CMN 103 (formerly CMN 203), Intercultural Communication

Students are encouraged to complete all three prior to taking additional coursework in the major.

Electives Requirement

Students select their remaining ten courses from among the course offerings of Communication Studies, Journalism, Media and Cinema Studies, and Public Relations and Advertising, including up to two classes from Digital Cinema.

Internship Credit

Students in the major may take CMN 294, Communication Internship or CMN 394, Advanced Communication Internship (when placement relates to the major) for credit. In order to take CMN 294, or CMN 394, students must have completed the three communication core courses (CMN 101, CMN 102, CMN 103) two courses in the chosen major and have fulfilled internship program eligibility requirements.

Unrestricted Electives

Students complete the bachelor's degree in Communication and Media by taking an additional 56 quarter hours selected from any courses offered by DePaul University.

Special Programs

Internship College
The department offers an internship program through which majors and minors can earn academic credit and gain practical experience in a professional setting. Students may be enrolled in CMN 294, Communication Internship, and/or CMN 394, Advanced Communication Internship, only after meeting college-established eligibility requirements. An individual student may participate in several internship experiences. A maximum of 16 quarter hours of internship and practicum credit can be applied to degree requirements. Communication majors may have two graded internships count toward completion of the major. CMN 294 may count as a communication elective and CMN 394 may count as a track elective when the internship is related to the track focus. Communication minors may have one graded internship count towards completion of the minor. Any one of these graded internships may also be used to fulfill the Junior Year Experiential Learning Requirement in the Liberal Studies Program. Subsequent hours of internship credit are taken on a pass/fail basis and fulfill unrestricted electives.

RADIO
The College manages WRDP, the campus radio station. Students may earn up to eight credit hours (four in the major) for radio production by enrolling with instructors permission in CMN 393, Communication Practicum.

The DePaulia
The DePaulia is the university’s student-run newspaper, which is integrated into the Communication curriculum. Published weekly since 1922, the newspaper covers news, sports, features, and community-related events. Editors on the newspaper are eligible for four hours of credit under CMN 393, Communication Practicum.

Public Debate
The College of Communication hosts public forums and provides students interested in debate the opportunity to create and lead debates on current issues in the news and at DePaul. Up to four credits can be earned for consistent participation in the public debate program, in CMN 393, Communication Practicum.

Public Relations Student Society of America (PRSSA)
PRSSA is a student-run organization for those interested in a career in public relations. The DePaul chapter organizes a variety of activities throughout the academic year including visits to Chicago public relations agencies, career fairs, and speaker events featuring industry professionals.

American Advertising Federation (AAF)
AAF is a student-run organization for those interested in a career in advertising. The DePaul chapter sponsors campus speakers, career information sessions, and visits to Chicago marketing communication firms. Student members are eligible to apply for AAF-sponsored internships, national career seminars, and student competitions.

DePaul Communication Organization (DCO)
Students who are interested in the field of Communication may join DCO, a student-run organization. DCO hosts a variety of activities, speaking events, and site visits throughout the year that allow students an opportunity to network with one another as well as professionals in the field. DCO is open to all DePaul students regardless of their major.
