College of Communication

Communication is the art and science of creating and sharing meaning. In the College of Communication, you'll develop a deeper understanding of the complex and challenging communication practices and processes that characterize our rapidly changing world; you'll master the techniques for crafting and delivering messages across a variety of social contexts and platforms: face to face, print, audio, video, Web and other social media. You'll learn from exceptional teachers - from professors who have many years of experience in some of the biggest media markets in the nation, and from scholars publishing in some of the top national and international journals. You'll gain hands-on experience in our state-of-the-art facilities, through our award-winning radio station and newspaper, and through a wide range of internships and community projects.

The recent creation of a College of Communication at DePaul has set the stage for enhanced quality, substantially enriched curricular and programmatic offerings, joint programming with other schools and colleges within the university, expanded opportunities for our students to engage in workplace experiential learning; increased regional and national visibility; and significant additional growth in undergraduate programs, graduate programs, and overall enrollments.

In order to better accommodate the increasing complexity of the undergraduate curriculum, student demand for more degree options in specialized areas, the need to better blend theory and practice, and the changing contours of communication fields with the advent of new media technologies and globalization, the College of Communication faculty recently approved five new BA degree programs (available Fall 2008).

They are:

BA in Communication Studies

The Bachelor of Arts in Communication Studies merges what used to be two distinct areas of study within the Department of Communication: Relational, Group and Organizational Communication, and Culture and Communication. The BA in Communication Studies is designed to respond flexibly to students desire to complete coursework examining the dynamics of human communication in interpersonal, group and workplace contexts, or intercultural and multicultural communication in various social, political, and performative settings. The merger between these two areas is all the more natural when one considers that both offer advanced coursework that supports a five-year program leading up to the MA in Organizational and Multicultural Communication.

BA in Journalism

The BA in Journalism prepares students to work as journalism professionals and places the social responsibility of the press and social justice at the center of the curriculum. This distinguishes the Journalism program both regionally and nationally. Part of the undergraduate journalism curriculum requires students to gather news and report on Chicago residents who might not always have a voice in our mainstream media. This type of community-based work is evident in courses such as Community Journalism, Investigative Reporting and Online Journalism. The existing five-year program in Journalism culminates in an MA in Journalism concentrating on social justice, social responsibility and ethics of the media. The resources (e.g., television studio and lab resources) available at the Communication and Media Center at the Loop campus now afford journalism students the opportunity to develop the technological expertise necessary to produce professional journalism and ensure that all students enter new multimedia and interactive environments prepared to work effectively.

BA in Media and Cinema Studies

The BA in Media and Cinema Studies strategically combines the faculty expertise, curricula and facilities of media areas in Communication, CTI (e.g., Digital Cinema) and other university units to provide students with the critical frameworks, creative opportunities and technological expertise to become socially responsible leaders in the growing and converging areas of multimedia. The major combines a rich course selection in several areas of study: film; radio, television, and new media. Coursework combines theory and critical analysis with production courses taught at both the Lincoln Park (e.g., radio) and Loop campuses (e.g., television/video or cinema). The BA in Media and Cinema Studies changes its name from Radio, TV, Film to better reflect its continued coverage of traditional media, and its growing curricular associations with the Digital Cinema Program. The Media and Cinema Studies major also houses the five-year BA/MA program leading up to the Master of Arts degree in Media, Culture and Society.

BA in Public Relations and Advertising

The BA in Public Relations and Advertising offers students a single flexible concentration, allowing for specialization in either public relations or advertising, or the pursuit of coursework in both. Classes in this program emphasize theory and practice, writing in both public relations and advertising, law and ethics, production, program development and implementation, critical perspectives, and special topics like contemporary trends, health public relations, and global messages.

BA in Communication and Media

The BA in Communication and Media offers students the opportunity to pursue an interdisciplinary, non-specialized program in communication and media. This generalist degree will provide flexibility for transfer students and others who have not determined their precise career trajectory, while affording them the fundamental communication and critical thinking skills needed to enter jobs across the public, private and non-profit sectors, or to continue their education in academic or professional post-graduate programs. This major will also serve the needs of those students who would like to complete a communication degree, by taking mostly evening courses.

Bachelor of Arts Degree Requirements

Competence in Modern Language

Students who intend to graduate with a Bachelor of Arts degree in the College of Communication will be required to demonstrate competence in a modern language. Such competence may be demonstrated in one of several ways:

- completing the last course in a second year high school course work in a modern language or Latin
- completing the last course in the first-year college sequence of any language completing a college course beyond the first-year level in any language
- achieving a satisfactory score on any of the Modern Language placement examinations administered at DePaul
- achieving a satisfactory rating in a proficiency examination accepted by DePaul
- achieving a score of 3 or higher on the Advance Placement (AP) test for any language (must be completed during high school)
- achieving a score of 5 or higher in the Language B assessment from a Standard or Higher Level International Baccalaureate (IB) program
- achieving a satisfactory score on the CLEP examination. (Note that CLEP scores may be used only to meet the language requirement. Credit is not awarded in modern languages on the basis of CLEP scores).

Students with some modern language training should consult with the Modern Language Department about the course with which they should begin. Students with little or no previous work in the language will be required to complete the entire three-course introductory sequence.

Learning Domains
Arts and Literature (AL) 2 Courses Required
Philosophical Inquiry (PI) 2 Courses Required
Scientific Inquiry (SI) 3 Courses Required
( Note: One must be a Lab.)
Self, Society and the Modern World (SSMW) 2 Courses Required
Religious Dimensions (RD) 2 Courses Required
Understanding the Past (UP) 2 Courses Required
Note: * Students must earn a C- or better in this course.

Note: Courses offered in the student's primary major cannot be taken to fulfill LSP Domain requirements. If students double major, LSP Domain courses may double count for both LSP credit and the second major. Students who choose to take an experiential learning course offered by the major may count it either as a general elective or the JYEL requirement.

In meeting learning domain requirements, no more than one course that is outside the students major and is cross-listed with a course within the students major, can be applied to count for LSP domain credit. This policy does not apply to those who are pursuing a double major or earning BFA or BM degrees.

Quantitative Reasoning and Technological Literacy:
Readiness for LSP 120 is determined by the math placement test taken online after admission. Students may need to take developmental coursework prior to LSP 120. The LSP 120 requirement may be waived by credit already earned for advanced math coursework or by passing a dedicated proficiency exam. Students who complete both LSP 120 and LSP 121 take one less Learning Domain course. Students may not apply the course reduction to any Domain where only one course is required, and if taken within the SI Domain, the reduction cannot be applied to the SI Lab requirement.

Major Requirements
All majors in the College of Communication consist of a total of thirteen courses. All majors complete a three-course common core and a combination of ten program requirements and electives. All communication majors must complete a declaration of major form on Campus Connect.

Unrestricted Electives
Students complete the Bachelors degree by taking an additional 56 quarter hours selected from any course offered by DePaul University. All communication majors must complete a declaration of major form on Campus Connect.

Addendum: Prior course credit for CMN 272  Concepts in Media Design; or CMN 347  Mass Media Criticism can still count as History/Criticism electives for any of the above-mentioned areas.

College of Communication - Undergraduate Studies ▶ Minors ▶ Performance Studies Minor

Performance Studies Minor

The Performance Studies Minor requires students to complete a total of 24 credit hours (six courses).

Students minoring in Performance Studies must take CMNS 230, Performance of Literature and five courses from the following:

INTC 206 (formerly CMNS 206), Communicating Multicultural Identities
The course examines identity from a critical/poststructuralist position, approaching the notion of identity as a performative and discursive production within complex systems of power, privilege, and oppression. Together, the class will examine the ways in which discourse influences our performances of personal identity as well as the ways that it constructs our ideas about other identities (gender, race sexuality, etc.). Through reading, discussion, and reflection, we will interrogate how individual and group identities are theorized, constructed, negotiated, and transformed; how identity is shaped by rhetorical discursive and non-discursive practices; and how identity construction is situated in historical/social/political/ideological contexts. The course has been approved as a Sophomore Multicultural Seminar in the Liberal Studies Domain.
INTC 305 (formerly CMNS 305), Performance Studies
The course traces the shift from the field of Oral Interpretation to the emergence of Performance Studies, as a discipline, with particular attention to the primary theorists and practitioners that have set the foundation and scope of the field of Performance. Taking a historical approach to the development of the field, the course will explore performance epistemologies, performative methodologies, and performative theories, offering students the opportunity to study and engage contemporary approaches to performance research.

INTC 308 (formerly CMNS 308), Topics in Intercultural Communication
Examination of the application of linguistic and rhetorical theories to various specializations in cultural discourse. The course focuses each term on one particular area such as semiotics, language acquisition, or language and power.

INTC 309 (formerly CMNS 309), International/Global Communication
Focuses on the world of international/global news flow and media systems in a comparative manner. Emphasizes changes that have followed the modernization of the media, the impact of globalization on individual countries, attempts to preserve the cultural character of domestic media content in the face of increased amounts of imported products, and the effects of new communication technologies, particularly the Internet.

INTC 323 (formerly CMNS 323), Communication and Social Movements
This course examines the rhetoric of social movements throughout American History. As a rhetoric class, the focus is primarily on the symbolic creation of movements in order to provide background of the political and social events that gave rise to the movement. Using readings from a variety of sources, we will investigate the discursive construction of power as it relates to society and politics. The class will take a case-study approach to examining social movement rhetoric, exploring the discourse that has served to resist oppressive, or perceptively oppressive, systems.

INTC 334 (formerly CMNS 334), Urban Communication
Examines relationships between material features of the city and symbolic representations of urban life (e.g., photography, film, songs, public discourse) with the goal of understanding the city as a site of communication. Special attention is paid to expressions of hope for and fear of the city.

INTC 330 (formerly CMNS 330), Topics in Performance
Advanced study in performance focusing on a specific genre each quarter such as: Poetry, Fiction, Nonfiction, Drama or Chamber Theater. Other possibilities include: performing autobiography; life performances; ritual, ceremony, and storytelling; and radio and television performances.
(Sample topics: Performance of Gender and Sexuality and Personal Narrative/Solo Performance) This course can and will be repeated for multiple course credit.

INTC 367 (formerly CMNS 367), Performance for Social Change
This is an experiential field experience that examines the role of performance in social activism. Student projects will identify a social issue of critical concerns and devise a performative response.

PRF 290 Performance Workshop for Non-majors
Performance Workshop (4 quarter hours) Students work on basic performance skills through individual and group exercises in acting, voice and speech and movement. Note: Can be taken by non-Theatre School students.

WGS 219 Gender and Performance
This course uses performance as a critical method for exploring how gender is socially constructed and enacted in everyday life as a means for learning what it means to be "feminine/masculine" or "other." Performances onstage, as well as everyday communicative behaviors, will be explored through performance workshops and discussions.

INTC 392 (formerly CMNS 392), Independent Study
1-4 credit hours.
Students take both MCS 271 Media and Cultural Studies and MCS 342 History of Television and Radio, plus three History/Criticism Courses and one Production course.

Three History/Criticism Courses from the following:

- MCS 231 Introduction to Documentary Studies
- MCS 271 Media and Cultural Studies
- MCS 331 Topics in Documentary Studies
- MCS 341 Topics in Radio Studies
- MCS 343 Media Ethics
- MCS 351 Topics in Television Studies
- MCS 352 Topics in New Media
- MCS 361 Fandom and Participatory Culture
- MCS 366 Communication, Technology, and Society
- INTC 309 (Formerly CMNS 309) Global Communication
- CMN 394 Advanced Communication Internship
- CMN 395 Communication Internship Special Topics

One Production course from the following:

- MCS 339 Radio Broadcasting
- MCS 357 Topics in Television Production
- MCS 373 Audio Documentary
- MCS 386 Radio Production
- MCS 389 Topics in Media Production
- DC 201 Introduction to Screenwriting

Relational, Group and Organizational Communication

To complete the minor in Relational, Group and Organizational Communication, students must take:

- CMNS 291 Research Methods
- CMNS 360 Communication Theory

Students may complete a minor in RGO Communication by taking four more courses from:

- RELC 211 (formerly CMNS 211), Interpersonal Communication
- ORGC 212 (formerly 212), Small Group Communication
- ORGC 251 (formerly CMNS 251), Organizational Communication
- RELC 311 (formerly CMNS 311), Topics in Relational Communication
- RELC 312 (formerly CMNS 312), Evolution and Communication
Latino Media and Communication

The minor in Latino Media and Communication is comprised of six courses. The minor allows students within the college and from other colleges, who have a strong interest in focusing their interest in Latino Studies, to develop them within the communication field. Students opting to pursue a minor in Latino Media and Communication may not pursue a concentration in the same subject area.

Minor Goals:
The program educates students to think critically about all aspects of media and communication, with a particular focus on Latino media and Latino communities. Coursework will provide students with the applied skills necessary to create communication strategies which effectively reach the Latino segment of the population, based on an understanding of Latino cultures in the US and grounded in an understanding of its cultural, economic and sociological aspects.

Learning Goals.
Students who complete the minor will:

- Develop an understanding of the heterogeneous and rapidly changing Latino communities locally, nationally, and globally.
- Ground their knowledge of intercultural studies within a more extensive and concrete knowledge of a particular (even though diverse), rapidly growing, and increasingly important population within the US Latino communities.
- Increase their cross-cultural competence (understanding and ability to dialogue across difference, develop cultural sensitivity and awareness) with Latino communities.
- Develop insights into the needs and motivations of Latino populations in the workplace, in community situations, and other sites of engagement, and develop communications tools and strategies to address those needs and motivations.
- Enhance their capacity to communicate with and learn from Latino populations in the workplace, in community situations, and other sites of engagement.
- Recognize the impact of the movement of Latinos across the globe and to develop the skills to critically consume and produce media, public relations, and advertisement representations that communicate to and about Latino communities.
- Both engage and demonstrate their interest in Latino Studies within and across diverse areas of knowledge production in the Communication field.

The Curriculum.
One required core course. Students may choose from EITHER of the following to meet the core course requirement:

LST 202 Multiculturalism in the United States: The Construction of Latino Communities
An introductory course that highlights the experiences of the major Latino groups in the United States. It brings together insight from history, politics, sociology, anthropology, literature, film and art to explore the social and cultural experiences of the Latino communities. The course deals with issues of immigration, relationships to home countries, border cultures, identity, and strategies of employment.

INTC 335 (formerly CMNS 335) Latino Communication, Culture, & Community
Examines the relationships among Latino cultures, communication, institutions, and public and private life. Students explore the possibilities and problems of contemporary forms of community through service in Latino community organizations. The course also fulfills the junior year experiential learning requirement through community based service learning.

Any additional five courses from:

The course deals with issues of immigration, relationships to home countries, border cultures, identity, and strategies of employment.

PSY 220 Latina/o Psychology
The purpose of this course is to examine the psychological research literature on the mental health and well being of Latina/o populations in the United States. A number of relevant topics will be examined, including the current state of Latinas/os in psychology, cultural characteristics and values, immigration, acculturation, ethnic identity, stereotypes and discrimination, health, and education. The goal of this course is for students to be better equipped in understanding the factors that influence the psychology of the Latina/o population.

INTC 335 (formerly CMNS 335) Latino Communication, Culture, & Community
Examines the relationships among Latino culture, communication, institutions, and public and private life. Students explore the possibilities and problems of contemporary forms of community through service in Latino community organizations. The course also fulfills the junior year experiential learning requirement through community based service learning.

INTC 308 (formerly CMNS 308) Topics in Intercultural Communication: (for designated Latino-focused topics)
For example ORIGINS: This course examines some of the foundations of Latino culture in both Mexico City and Chicago through a two one-week immersion experiences in each city. Students create photographic projects while examining the history, cultural discourses, rituals, and other aspects of culture in the Latino communities in both countries. The immersion weeks each involve 5 day-long classes with lectures and field trips. This is an exchange program with Universidad Panamericana in Mexico City.

An additional topic is The Puerto Rican Nation: A Transnational Perspective: A Service Learning Travel Course to Puerto Rico. This service learning travel course is a three-week study abroad summer session in Puerto Rico. It combines two courses in Modern Languages and Latin American and Latino Studies where students will explore transnational connections that create a nation transcending national borders and binding the reality of Puerto Ricans on the island with those living in diaspora in Chicago and elsewhere.

JOUR 377 Journalism Topics (for designated Latino-focused topics)
This course allows students to sample a range of topical offerings in journalism that have included press law and ethics, arts and entertainment reporting, business and finance reporting, science and technology reporting, health and medicine reporting, tabloid journalism, war reporting, and reporting religion and moral issues. Topics for this concentration might include: Covering the Latino Community in Chicago, Covering the Immigration Debate, Latino Popular Culture (Prereq: JOUR 275).

LST 300 Topics in Latin American Studies: Documentary in the Americas This course explores the various forms and functions of documentary in Latin American countries and created by Latin American documentary filmmakers and videomakers.

MCS 350 Topics in Global Cinema: Latin American Cinemas
This course is designed as a critical study of global filmmakers and the issues surrounding cinema and its transnational circulation. The class will examine specific aspects of the growth and evolution of cinema and look at points of contact between different cultural discourses, national cinematic styles, genres, and Look at points of contact between different cultural discourses, national cinematic styles, genres, and reception. Artistic, social, political, and industrial issues will be examined to provide different models of cinematic creation and consumption. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 353 Topics in Media Studies (cross-listed with CMNS 308 Topics in Intercultural Communication: Topic - Photography and Culture ORIGINS)
This course examines some of the foundations of Latino culture in Mexico City, Guadalajara Mexico and Chicago through two one-week immersion experiences in both countries. Students create photographic projects while examining the history, cultural discourse, economics, cultural rituals and other aspects of culture in the Latino communities in both countries.

MCS 375 Latino/a Television and Media
Drawing from Latin American and U.S. television studies, this course explores the political, industrial and cultural dynamics that shape televisual representations in Latin American television and/or Spanish language Television in the US. More specifically, Spanish-language television and media will be examined from interdisciplinary frameworks, which include the cultural analysis of televisual modes, national and international regulations of media production and distribution, histories of production, and ethnographies of viewing.

MCS 376 Latin American Cinema
This course examines the production, distribution and impact of cinema in the Latin American context. Transnational relations with other industries, such as Hollywood and the European film context will be considered. We will investigate how social, economic and political forces have shaped or are presently influencing and transforming national cinemas. Questions of identity and cultural difference, particularly in relation to immigration, diasporas, transnationalism, youth culture, class, gender, sexuality, race and ethnicity are central to the discussions. We will consider the diversity of styles and topics that are now redefining the cinema of the region.

PRAD 361 Account Planning and Consumer Insights for Latino Markets
This course encompasses both the similarities and differences of Latino consumers in the U.S. and explores the differences among the unique Latino cultures, their media habits and the effectiveness of using various promotional tools to affect their consumer behavior. The account planner represents the voice of the consumer in the advertising process. This course will examine the role of account planning and its relationship within advertising agencies to creative development. Special emphasis will be placed on the qualitative and ethnographic research techniques used by planners, and the role that curiosity and empathy play in understanding different Latino consumer audiences to gain insight about these groups' motivations and behaviors. Prerequisite: PRAD 244.

PRAD 362 Latino Strategic Communication Campaigns (formerly PRAD 392)
Focuses on how to effectively target messages to Latino populations in ways that move beyond stereotypic and simplistic models of Latino audiences. Emphasis on developing culturally relevant integrated campaigns that incorporate appreciation of the diversity of Latino audiences. Students learn creative strategies for dialoguing with Latino consumers, customers, stakeholders, and influencers to develop public relations and advertising messaging in both the commercial and non-profit sector. Distinctive characteristics of the Latino population are considered, along with the rich diversity of these communities. Consideration given to effective use of new media and strategic decisions about communicating in English versus Spanish. Successful completion of PRAD 244 or 255; PRAD 256; and CMNS/PRAD 291 is required prior to entrance to any PRAD campaigns course.

PRAD 392 Special Topics in Advertising
This course allows students to sample a range of topical offerings in advertising that have included Media Planning, Advertising in the Digital Age, Ad Copywriting, Advanced Advertising Campaigns, Consumer Promotions, and Psychology of Advertising. Topics for this concentration might include: Media Planning for Latino Markets, Ad Copywriting for Latino Markets, The Advertising Industry in Latin America. Prerequisite: PRAD 244

PRAD 391 Special Topics in Public Relations
This course allows students to sample a range of topical offerings in public relations that have included International Communication and PR, Event Planning, and Study Abroad. In addition to these topics, new topics for this concentration might include Media Relations in Latin America, The Use of Social Media Among Latinos, Marketing PR Strategies for Latino Markets, and other Latino relevant topics. Prerequisite: PRAD 244 or PRAD 255.

MKT 340 Marketing across Cultures Latin Markets
The course is designed to challenge students to think critically about culture and international marketing, with an emphasis and perspective on Latin America. The course is structured to examine cross-cultural and intercultural approaches that intertwine with the international business environment and the impact that both have on the marketing of goods and services.

MKT 341 Integrated Marketing Communication: Multicultural Markets
An overview of the principles of integrated marketing communications and how these are applied to the growing multicultural market in the US. The course will focus on the application of integrating marketing principles to this increasingly complex and fragmented market. The course includes an overview of the multicultural markets, media environment, and the tools available for designing integrated marketing communications programs, including promotions. The course structure will include statistical reports, case studies, exercises, experiences and guest lectures. Real-life cases will be studied in the class with students delivering a mini-advertising/IMC plan at the end of the course.

CMN 394 Advanced Communication Internship (for credit in this concentration, the internships must focus on Latino media and communication)
Placement of students in business, industry, or not-for-profit major specific internships. Opportunities in advertising, public relations, journalism, radio and television, museums and philanthropic outreach organizations. Program open to communication majors and minors who meet eligibility requirements.

CMN 395 Communication Internship Special Topics (for credit in this concentration, the internships must focus on Latino media and communication)
This course is for students who wish to receive academic credit for a second or third internship. Must be a Communication major or minor who has completed CMN 394 or ISP250 and meets eligibility requirements. Must be taken concurrently with an internship. Topics include building and managing a communication career, effective networking, and leadership development.

SPN 393: Latino Media Literacy
This class explores the role and impact of the media in the Latino community and how Latinos are represented as well as how they view themselves. It explores Latino communities participation as creators and consumers of popular and media cultures. It examines media organization and their role in shaping popular cultures. This is both an upper level undergraduate and graduate level, inter-disciplinary course in Spanish that draws on bilingual readings. Students can also explore these issues through service learning with community partners and by doing a minimum of 25 hours service can receive credit for the Junior Year Experimental Learning domain.

SPN 198, 298, 398 Foreign Language

CSS 201 Perspectives on Community Service

CSS 390 Special Topics in Community Service Studies (cross-listed with LST 300 Special Topics: Transnational Communities: Puerto Rico/ABD Fall Quarter)
The post-trip Fall Quarter course will focus on Puerto Rican nationalism, culture, media and politics in Chicago and will include a service-learning component. Students will be guided through critical analysis of their experiences in Puerto Rico in order to enhance their service learning experiences. They will complete a final project developed in conjunction with one of the cultural, academic, or business sites in the community and will be challenged to link these projects to the knowledge they acquired in Puerto Rico.

Special Programs

American Advertising Federation (AAF)
The DePaul Student Advertising Group is the official organization for students interested in advertising at DePaul University. Our purpose is to bring together students who share a passion for great advertising and communication solutions. Our group helps prepare students for a career in advertising by facilitating an ongoing dialogue that covers the latest developments and trends in the ad industry. We do this through a mix of guest speakers and advertising industry presentations, student ad competitions, networking and career information sessions, visits to local Chicago area advertising/communication agencies, and social events.

Debate
The College of Communication promotes social and political discussion through debate. This activity develops presentation, reasoning and persuasive skills and offers students the opportunity to participate in a variety of formats. Debate also deepens students' understanding of the issues which will shape the future.

DePaul Communication Organization (DCO)
Students who are interested in the field of Communication may join DCO, a student-run organization. DCO hosts a variety of activities, speaking events, and site visits throughout the year that allow students an opportunity to network with one another as well as professionals in the field. DCO is open to all DePaul students regardless of their major.

Good Day DePaul (GDD)
Good Day DePaul is a student run news magazine show that caters to DePaul students and college aged students in general. The program films one to two times a month and features DePaul news as well as current events. Students produce, direct, and anchor the program, as well as conduct in studio interviews.

Internship College
The College offers an internship program through which majors and minors can earn academic credit and gain practical experience in a professional setting. Students may be enrolled in CMN 394, Advanced Communication Internship, and/or CMN 395, Communication Internship Special Topics (topics vary), only after meeting college-established eligibility requirements. An individual student may participate in several internship experiences. A maximum of 16 quarter hours of internship and practicum credit can be applied to degree requirements. CMN 394 may be used to fulfill the Junior Year Experiential Learning Requirement in the Liberal Studies Program and/or as a major field requirement. If a second internship is taken, CMN 395 may count as a communication elective. A maximum of two graded internships can be used toward the major field requirements. Subsequent hours of internship credit are taken through different CMN 395 special topics courses and fulfill unrestricted electives. Communication minors may have one graded internship count towards completion of the minor.

Public Relations Student Society of America (PRSSA)
PRSSA is a student-run organization for those interested in a career in public relations. The DePaul chapter organizes a variety of activities throughout the academic year including visits to Chicago public relations agencies, career fairs, speaker events featuring industry professionals, as well as a mentoring program and young alumni outreach effort geared to connect members to recent graduates now in the field.

Radio DePaul
The College manages Radio DePaul, the campus radio station. Students may earn up to eight credit hours (four in the major) for radio production by enrolling with instructor's permission in CMN 393, Communication Practicum.

Society of Professional Journalists (SPJ)
This is a student-run organization for students interested in careers in journalism. The DePaul chapter sponsors campus speakers, career information sessions, and journalism seminars/conferences. Student members are eligible to apply for SPJ-sponsored internships and student competitions.

The DePaulia
The DePaulia is the university's student-run paper and web site, which is integrated into the Communication curriculum. Published weekly since 1922, the newspaper covers news, sports, features, and community-related events. Editors on the newspaper are eligible for four hours of credit under JOUR 393, Journalism Practicum.

Note: Courses offered in the student's primary major cannot be taken to fulfill LSP Domain requirements. If students double major, LSP Domain courses may double count for both LSP credit and the second major. Students who choose to take an experiential learning course offered by the major may count it either as a general elective or the JYEL requirement.

Quantitative Reasoning and Technological Literacy: All Communication students must complete the placement exam for Quantitative Reasoning and Technological Literacy. Students must complete the one course into which they place (LSP 120 or LSP 121). Students who complete both LSP 120 and LSP 121 take one less Domain course. Students may not apply the course reduction to any Domain where only one course is required, and if taken within the SI Domain, the reduction cannot be applied to the SI Lab requirement.

Effective Summer 2010, changes were made to the liberal studies domain requirements allowing for more flexibility.
Current students may also benefit from the less restrictive LSP domain requirements. Please note that the change is reflected in this liberal studies requirement grid.

Core Requirements

The Bachelor of Arts in Communication Studies

The College of Communication offers a variety of courses leading to a Bachelor of Arts degree in Communication Studies. The program explores effective and participatory communication in interpersonal, small group, public, organizational, intercultural, rhetorical and performative contexts. Through a blend of theory and practice, students are encouraged to think, speak, and write clearly; to develop confidence and ability as ethical communicators; to view communication events from multiple perspectives; to understand the multicultural character of communication in contemporary society; to analyze and evaluate variables operating in verbal transactions; to probe the basic problems of human communication in order to understand self, others, and events; and to recognize the connections between communication studies and other disciplines.

Students whose professional goals are in the public, private, or non-profit sectors, such as government, training and human resources, and social and human services are well served by relational, group, and organizational communication, as well as courses in communication and culture, performance studies, and rhetoric. In addition, the B.A. in Communication Studies prepares students who want to continue their education, to excel in academic or professional graduate programs.

Core Requirements

The Bachelor of Arts in Public Relations and Advertising

The College of Communication offers a variety of courses leading to a Bachelor of Arts degree in Public Relations and Advertising. The program examines theories and practices in the related fields of public relations and advertising, and considers advertising and public relations processes, products and effects from cultural, ethical, organizational, historical, creative and methodological perspectives. Students in Public Relations and Advertising studies learn to think critically and analytically, to develop ideas clearly, and to speak and write effectively. Within the broad context of human communication and the liberal arts, students explore the relationship of public relations and advertising activities to other aspects of human endeavor. Graduates are prepared for entry level positions within the public and private sectors, or for continuing their education in academic or professional graduate programs.

Core Requirements

The Bachelor of Arts in Media and Cinema Studies
The College of Communication, located at the Loop Campus, offers a variety of courses leading to a Bachelor of Arts degree in Media and Cinema Studies. The BA in Media and Cinema Studies strategically combines faculty expertise, cutting-edge facilities, and a variety of course offerings within Communication, the School of Cinema and Interactive Media (CIM) (e.g., Digital Cinema), and other University units to provide students with the critical frameworks, creative opportunities, and technological expertise to become socially responsible leaders in the growing and converging areas of media studies. The major combines a rich course selection in four areas of study: film, radio, TV, and new media. Coursework combines theory and critical analysis with production courses taught at both the Lincoln Park (e.g., radio) and Loop campuses (e.g., television/video and cinema studies).

College of Communication - Undergraduate Studies ▸ Degree Programs ▸ Bachelor of Arts in Communication and Media ▸ Core Requirements

Core Requirements

The Bachelor of Arts in Communication and Media

The College of Communication offers a variety of courses leading to a Bachelor of Arts degree in Communication and Media. The BA in Communication and Media offers students the opportunity to pursue coursework in communication and media that draws upon two or more related areas of study. This degree will provide flexibility for transfer students and others who have not determined their precise career trajectory, while affording them the fundamental communication and critical thinking skills needed to enter jobs across the public, private and non-profit sectors, or to continue their education in academic or professional post-graduate programs. This major is designed especially for those students holding allied field interests, as well as those who would like to complete a communication degree, by taking mostly evening courses. In order to complete this degree, students have the option of pursuing coursework from any of the other majors offered in the College of Communication.

COMMUNICATION AND MEDIA REQUIREMENTS

Communication and Media majors must complete the three core courses required of all College of Communication students. In addition, they must take ten electives from among the College of Communication course offerings. Five of these courses must be 300-level classes. All Communication and Media majors must complete a total of 13 classes, or 52 credit hours.

Common Core

The core courses are required of all College of Communication Studies students:

CMN 101, Introduction to Human Communication
CMN 102, Introduction to Mass Communication
CMN 103, Intercultural Communication

Students are encouraged to complete all three prior to taking additional course work in the major.

PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS

Presentation Requirement

All Communication and Media majors must take one presentation skills course from the following selection of classes:

ORGC 201, (formerly CMNS 201) Business and Professional Communication
INTC 220, (formerly CMNS 220) Public Speaking
INTC 230, (formerly CMNS 230) Performance of Literature
CMNS 306, Topics in Presentation
INTC 322, (formerly CMNS 322) Advanced Public Speaking (prerequisite INTC 220, or permission)
INTC 330, (formerly CMNS 330) Topics in Performance
Media Analysis Requirement
All Communication and Media majors must take one media analysis course from the following selection of classes:
MCS 231, Introduction to Documentary Studies
MCS 271, Media and Cultural Studies
MCS 273, Film/Video Analysis

Communication and Media Electives
All Communication and Media majors must take two elective courses from Communication (from Intercultural, Organizational or Relational Communication) and two elective courses dealing with Media (from Journalism, Media and Cinema Studies, or Public Relations and Advertising).

Students select their remaining four courses from among the course offerings of Intercultural Communication, Organizational Communication, Relational Communication, Journalism, Media and Cinema Studies, and Public Relations and Advertising, including up to two approved classes from Digital Cinema (approved classes are DC 200, DC 201, DC 210, DC 215, DC 220, DC 271, DC 272, DC 275, DC 301, DC 310, DC 371 DC 372).

Internship Credit
Students in the major may take CMN 394, Advanced Communication Internship (when placement relates to the major) and CMN 395, Communication Internship Special Topics for credit. In order to take CMN 394 and CMN 395, students must have completed the three communication core courses (CMN 101, CMN 102, CMN 103), have fulfilled both the presentation and the media requirements for this major, and have fulfilled internship program eligibility requirements.

Bachelor of Arts Degree in Professional Communication for Adults

Core Requirements

Adult Degree Completion Program: Professional Communication Studies
Through the Bachelor of Arts in Professional Communication Studies, you will examine communication processes in organizational group and public settings and the relationship between effective communication and organizational structure. You will learn how to communicate for organizational change in multicultural settings. You will polish your writing and speaking skill as well as gain those skills needed to succeed in fields such as training and development, management, public relations, marketing and organizational communication, event planning, social networks and advertising. Because this degree is for students age 24 or older who have an associate degree or an equivalent 66 hours of transferable credit, you will be learning with peers. You will gain experience working with, learning from and completing educational projects with other adults in a program specifically designed to meet your practical and academic needs. You will create a professional portfolio that you can use as you further your career.

Program Overview
Upon completion of this degree, Communication Studies students are expected to:

- Articulate the impact of language/discourse on attitudes, actions, and on identity formation.
- Understand and appreciate the complexities of human communication, and how these dynamics impact life in relationships, groups, organizational and intercultural settings.
- Be able to understand and critique the effectiveness of human communication in multiple contexts.
- Have the knowledge and skills to work effectively in relational, group and organizational settings.
- Have the capacity to exert influence and affect outcomes in relational, group and organizational settings.
- Understand the symbiotic relationship between communication and culture.

Note: Courses offered in the student's primary major cannot be taken to fulfill LSP Domain requirements. If students double major, LSP Domain courses may double count for both LSP credit and the second major. Students who choose to take an experiential learning course offered by the major may count it either as a general elective or the JYEL requirement.

In meeting learning domain requirements, no more than one course that is outside the students major and is cross-listed with a course within the students major, can be applied to count for LSP domain credit. This policy does not apply to those who are pursuing a double major or earning BFA or BM degrees.

Quantitative Reasoning and Technological Literacy:
Readiness for LSP 120 is determined by the math placement test taken online after admission. Students may need to take developmental coursework prior to LSP 120. The LSP 120 requirement may be waived by credit already earned for advanced math coursework or by passing a dedicated proficiency exam. Students who complete both LSP 120 and LSP 121 take one less Learning Domain course. Students may not apply the course reduction to any Domain where only one course is required, and if taken within the SI Domain, the reduction cannot be applied to the SI Lab requirement.
Core Requirements

The Bachelor of Arts in Intercultural Communication
The BA in Intercultural Communication offers students an interdisciplinary degree program that is inclusive of rhetorical studies, performance studies, language and social interaction, sociolinguistics, ethnography, gender studies, public address, critical/cultural communication, and global/transnational studies. Students in this program engage theories and methods for understanding human communication across a variety of intercultural contexts, ranging from urban communication, popular culture, and consumerism to a broad intersection of identities (race, gender, sexuality, class, nation, age, religion, ability).

The curriculum is both deep and broad, enabling students to gain practical expertise in their area of interest while gaining a working knowledge of related areas. The curriculum focuses on ethical practice and the convergence of traditional and new media, preparing students for professional practice in an evolving marketplace. Students learn to express themselves well in oral and written communications, to think critically about communication events all around them, to develop skills valuable in the workplace, and to communicate effectively in a diverse world.

Core Requirements

The Bachelor of Arts in Relational Communication
The BA in Relational Communication provides students with a research-based understanding of communication in close relationships. The program, through a blend of theory and practice, helps students identify, analyze and meet the challenges of communicating effectively among individuals in both personal and professional relationships. Students will acquire the knowledge and skills necessary to initiate, develop, maintain, and competently dissolve relationships in an ethical manner.

The curriculum is both deep and broad, enabling students to gain practical expertise in their area of interest while gaining a working knowledge of related areas. Students learn to express themselves well in oral and written communications, to think critically about communication events all around them, to develop skills valuable in the workplace, and to communicate effectively in a diverse world.

Concentrations

Latino Media and Communication

Latino Media and Communication

Concentration Goals:
The program educates students to think critically about all aspects of media and communication, with a particular focus on Latino media and Latino communities. Coursework provides students with the applied skills necessary to create communication strategies which effectively reach the Latino segment of the population, based on an understanding of Latino cultures in the US and grounded in an understanding of its cultural, economic and sociological aspects.

Learning Goals.
Students who complete the concentration will:

- Develop an understanding of the heterogeneous and rapidly changing Latino communities locally, nationally, and globally.
- Ground their knowledge of intercultural studies within a more extensive and concrete knowledge of a particular (even though diverse), rapidly growing, and increasingly important population within the US Latino communities.
- Increase their cross-cultural competence (understanding and ability to dialogue across difference, develop cultural sensitivity and awareness) with Latino communities.
- Develop insights into the needs and motivations of Latino populations in the workplace, in community situations, and other sites of engagement, and develop communications tools and strategies to address those needs and motivations.
- Enhance their capacity to communicate with and learn from Latino populations in the workplace, in community situations, and other sites of engagement.
- Recognize the impact of the movement of Latinos across the globe and to develop the skills to critically consume and produce media, public relations, and advertisement representations that communicate to and about Latino communities.
- Both engage and demonstrate their interest in Latino Studies within and across diverse areas of knowledge production in the Communication field.

The Curriculum.

One required core course. Students may choose from EITHER of the following to meet the core course requirement:

LST 202 Multiculturalism in the United States: The Construction of Latino Communities
An introductory course that highlights the experiences of the major Latino groups in the United States. It brings together insight from history, politics, sociology, anthropology, literature, film and art to explore the social and cultural experiences of the Latino communities. The course deals with issues of immigration, relationships to home countries, border cultures, identity, and strategies of employment.

INTC 335 (formerly CMNS 335) Latino Communication, Culture, & Community
Examines the relationships among Latino culture, communication, institutions, and public and private life. Students explore the possibilities and problems of contemporary forms of community through service in Latino community organizations. The course also fulfills the junior year experiential learning requirement through community based service learning.

Any additional three courses from:

LST 202 Multiculturalism in the United States: The Construction of Latino Communities
An introductory course that highlights the experiences of the major Latino groups in the United States. It brings together insight from history, politics, sociology, anthropology, literature, film and art to explore the social and cultural experiences of the Latino communities. The course deals with issues of immigration, relationships to home countries, border cultures, identity, and strategies of employment.

PSY 220 Latina/o Psychology
The purpose of this course is to examine the psychological research literature on the mental health and well-being of Latina/o populations in the United States. A number of relevant topics will be examined, including the current state of Latinas/os in psychology, cultural characteristics and values, immigration, acculturation, ethnic identity, stereotypes and discrimination, health, and education. The goal of this course is for students to be better equipped in understanding the factors that influence the psychology of the Latina/o population.

INTC 335 (formerly CMNS 335) Latino Communication, Culture, & Community
Examines the relationships among Latino culture, communication, institutions, and public and private life. Students explore the possibilities and problems of contemporary forms of community through service in Latino community organizations. The course also fulfills the junior year experiential learning requirement through community based service learning.

INTC 308 (formerly CMNS 308) Topics in Cultural Discourse: Photography and Culture (cross-listed Intercultural Communication: (for designated Latino-focused topics) with MCS 353, Topics in Media Studies: Photography and Culture)
Examines For example ORIGINS: This course examines some of the foundations of Latino culture in both Mexico City and Chicago through a two one-week immersion experiences in each city. Students create photographic projects while examining the history, cultural discourses, rituals, and other aspects of culture in the Latino communities in both countries. The immersion weeks each involve 5 day-long classes with lectures and field trips. This is an exchange program with Universidad Panamericana in Mexico City. An additional topic is The Puerto Rican Nation: A Transnational Perspective: A Service Learning Travel Course to Puerto Rico. This service learning travel course is a three-week study abroad summer session in Puerto Rico. It combines two courses in Modern Languages and Latin American and Latino Studies where students will explore transnational connections that create a nation transcending national borders and binding the reality of Puerto Ricans on the island with those living in diaspora in Chicago and elsewhere.

This course allows students to sample a range of topical offerings in journalism that have included press law and ethics, arts and entertainment reporting, business and finance reporting, science and technology reporting, health and medicine reporting, tabloid journalism, war reporting, and reporting religion and moral issues. Topics for this concentration might include: Covering the Latino Community in Chicago, Covering the Immigration Debate, Latino Popular Culture (Prereq: JOUR 275).

LST 300 Topics in Latin American Studies: Documentary in the Americas
This course explores the various forms and functions of documentary in Latin American countries and created by Latin American documentary filmmakers and videomakers.

MCS 350 Topics in Global Cinema: Latin American Cinemas
This course is designed as a critical study of global filmmakers and the issues surrounding cinema and its transnational circulation. The class will examine specific aspects of the growth and evolution of cinema and look at points of contact between different cultural discourses, national cinematic styles, genres, and reception. Artistic, social, political, and industrial issues will be examined to provide different models of cinematic creation and consumption. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 353 Topics in Media Studies (cross-listed with CMNS 308 Topics in Intercultural Communication: Topic - Photography and Culture ORIGINS)
This course examines some of the foundations of Latino culture in Mexico City, Guadalajara Mexico and Chicago through two one-week immersion experiences in both countries. Students create photographic projects while examining the history, cultural discourse, economics, cultural rituals and other aspects of culture in the Latino communities in both countries.

MCS 375 Latino/a Television and Media
Drawing from Latin American and U.S. television studies, this course explores the political, industrial and cultural dynamics that shape televisual representations in Latin American television and/or Spanish language Television in the US. More specifically, Spanish-language television and media will be examined from interdisciplinary frameworks, which include the cultural analysis of televisual modes, national and international regulations of media production and distribution, histories of production, and ethnographies of viewing.

MCS 376 Latin American Cinema
This course examines the production, distribution and impact of cinema in the Latin American context. Transnational relations with other industries, such as Hollywood and the European film context will be considered. We will investigate how social, economic and political forces have shaped or are presently influencing and transforming national cinemas. Questions of identity and cultural difference, particularly in relation to immigration, diasporas, transnationalism, youth culture, class, gender, sexuality, race and ethnicity are central to the discussions. We will consider the diversity of styles and topics that are now redefining the cinema of the region.

PRAD 361 Account Planning and Consumer Insights for Latino Markets
This course encompasses both the similarities and differences of Latino consumers in the U.S. and explores the differences among the unique Latino cultures, their media habits and the effectiveness of using various promotional tools to affect their consumer behavior. The account planner represents the voice of the consumer in the advertising process. This course will examine the role of account planning and its relationship within advertising agencies to creative development. Special emphasis will be placed on the qualitative and ethnographic research techniques used by planners, and the role that curiosity and empathy play in understanding different Latino consumer audiences to gain insight about these groups' motivations and behaviors. Prerequisite: PRAD 244.

PRAD 362 Latino Strategic Communication Campaigns (formerly PRAD 392)
Focuses on how to effectively target messages to Latino populations in ways that move beyond stereotypic and simplistic models of Latino audiences. Emphasis on developing culturally relevant integrated campaigns that incorporate appreciation of the diversity of Latino audiences. Students learn creative strategies for dialoguing with Latino consumers, customers, stakeholders, and influencers to develop public relations and advertising messaging in both the commercial and non-profit sector. Distinctive characteristics of the Latino population are considered, along with the rich diversity of these communities. Consideration given to effective use of new media and strategic decisions about communicating in English versus Spanish. Successful completion of PRAD 244 or 255; PRAD 256; and CMNS/PRAD 291 is required prior to entrance to any PRAD campaigns course.
